Tourist Guidebook

"Kirin-no-Irumachi (Town of the Kirin)" by Konno Fumiyo (manga artist and resident of Fukuchiyama City)

Fukuchiyama, the castle town that Akechi Mitsuhide built.

Fukuchiyama Castle

The Tamba base build by Akechi Mitsuhide

Fukuchiyama Castle dates back to 1579,

when Akechi Mitsuhide was ordered by Oda Nobunaga to build a castle here as a frontline base for his attack on western Japan, after subduing Tamba.

The good government of Mitsuhide, including offering tax exemptions and efforts for flood control on the Yuragawa River, laid the foundation for the Fukuchiyama City of today, and he is still loved by local citizens as a great leader.

Beautiful in all four seasons

Akechi Mitsuhide (1528?-1582)

He was a warlord who served as the chief vassal to Oda Nobunaga, but his early life remains a mystery in large part. He is known for his good government over his domain and also for being a well-educated intellectual. He would eventually defeat his lord Oda Nobunaga in the "Honnoji Incident" which is said to be the greatest mystery in Japanese history.

Castle seal

The characters for "Fukuchiyama Castle" is taken from an old document of the Kutsuki family, the feudal lord, and the background is decorated with the bellflower crest of the Akechi family. Currently available for sale at the Fukuchiyama Castle Main Tower
(¥300 per sheet, including tax)

Map numbers are linked to the numbers on the Fukuchiyama City Map on pages 14 and 15.

Stone Walls

The seemingly messy stacking method of "Nozura-zumi" is actually a skillful way of combining natural stones, some of which are from the time at which the castle was built. The stone walls are also known as "converted stones", which utilize stones that form part of other stone structures such as memorial towers and tombs. These were probably collected from nearby temples, and there are many theories as to why this may have been the case, but it is believed that incorporating them into the stone walls was a way of showing control, destroying the temples that were the symbols of the former powers.

Organic JAS Certified Koshihikari “Kyo no Kiwami”

“Kyo no Kiwami” is a superior quality rice that is grown without the use of pesticides or chemical fertilizers. In 2017 it won the gold medal at the Kyoto Premium Rice Contest.

Oe no Oni Red Amazake and Oe no Oni Amazake

This is a sweet sake (Amazake) with a refreshing flavor made from rice and malt grown in the village of Tanada.

Kentaro no Kyoto Wild Game - Venison Keema Curry

In addition to venison, locally grown vegetables and spices are used to produce this keema curry. They are dedicated to also providing high quality and safe wild game.

Makoro's Kuripan (chestnut bread)

Formed into the shape of a large chestnut, you can enjoy the luxurious taste of a whole Fukuchiyama Tamba chestnut. The flavor, ingredients and packaging have been carefully selected to produce a product of perfection.

Tengamine Log-grown Dried Mushrooms

These are grown with the blessings of nature (water, light and temperature) on logs in the wilderness of the Oe Mountains and Tengamine. These shiitake mushrooms are thick and full of great flavor.

Kyoto Tamba Akamen (Red Noodles)

This product was the idea of one of the city's high school students. These sweet and fragrant noodles are kneaded together with Manganji peppers.

Sake Lees Pickled Black Soybeans - Renewal

This wonderful product has a flavor handed down from the terraced rice fields of Kehara, and born from this new combination of black beans and sake lees.

Kyo Jidori Chicken

They began raising Kyo Jidori Chicken because of the desire that “the chicken shouldn't be obscure”. With no odor, this chicken has the characteristic flavor and firmness.

Hata-san's Tamba Chestnuts

These chestnuts are carefully grown without pesticides or fertilizers and is refrigerated at -1°C for about a month to further enhance its sweetness and flavor.

Tamba Chestnut Baked Kuri-kinton - Treasures of Mitsuhide

These elegantly flavored Kuri-kinton are based using only local Tamba chestnuts and sugar.

“Kyo-hotaru” Polished Rice

This delicious rice with a dynamic texture has larger grains than normal, being grown in an area where there is a large difference between day and night temperatures near the headwaters of the Ouchi River.

Kyoto Tamba Manganji Dressing

Fukuchiyama Manganji peppers are a typical example of Kyoto vegetables. They are characterized by the sweetness and flavorful aroma of the fully ripe peppers.

Kentaro no Kyoto Wild Game – Roasted Venison

High quality venison is prepared quickly and carefully immediately after capture and is then cooked at low temperature to produce delicious odorless and tender roasted meat.

Kyoto Tamba Chestnut Porotan

Called "Porotan" signifying the way in which its astringent skin easily peels away. Tamba chestnuts are characterized by their high-quality flavor due to advanced cultivation techniques and careful preservation methods.

Tamba Chestnut Cake

These high-quality pound cakes use a lot of Tamba chestnuts and other carefully selected ingredients.

Hoon-ji Temple Morning Bamboo Shoot Dig

The morning dig for bamboo shoots which is a 200-year tradition at Hoon-ji Temple, produces bamboo shoots characterized by their softness and lack of "sourness". They are sold where they are dug up and are so popular that they sell out in about an hour and a half.

Your First Croquette

The main ingredient is potatoes, grown in the fields on site, and these are mixed with seasonal vegetables to produce these handmade croquettes.

Meats!
